ProQuest News & Newspapers is an international newspaper database. It contains various news streams, based on geographical areas – the US, Canada and International, which covers the rest of the world. The news streams contain the searchable full-text of many national and regional newspapers, including the Financial Times, Guardian/Observer, Independent, Times, New York Times and Wall Street Journal.

Location
ProQuest Newsstreams can be accessed via the Electronic Resources section of the Library website. There are separate links for the various news streams on the A-Z List of Databases; the most useful for your studies is probably European Newsstream, which is a sub-section of International Newsstream. Click on the relevant letter from the list and then click on the database link. There may also be a link to a news stream on your subject guide.

Electronic Resources Login
When you click on the resource title, you will see the University of Bolton’s Electronic Resources Login. Enter your usual university username and password and login

Finding Information
Enter your search term(s) in the search box, using inverted commas, if you are search for a phrase, and click Search.

You can click on Advanced search for more search options and Search Tips for help.
Think about the keywords that are most relevant to your research. You may need to do several searches using different keywords.

Viewing Results.

To read an article click on the title or Full text. Some newspapers are not available as full text in ProQuest Newsstreams, for example, the Manchester Evening News. Click on Find a copy to see if we have the article in another database or go to the newspaper’s website and search for the article title. There should be plenty of full-text articles available on the database for your research. You can remove abstract only results by ticking the Full text box and running the search again.

Use the tick box beside results to save items. These results are accessible through the Selected items link during your current session. However, they will not be retained when you exit the database unless you set up a My Research account, using the link, in the top right corner, to save documents permanently. You can also export the citations to Refworks if you have set up a Refworks account.

ProQuest Newsstreams can also be searched as part of ProQuest Central, a large multi-disciplinary academic database. This means that you can search for journal articles and newspaper articles simultaneously. Select ProQuest Central from the A-Z list and see the ProQuest Central cribsheet for further information.

Similarly, the content of ProQuest Newsstreams is also available via Discover@Bolton, the Library’s integrated search facility. See the Discover@Bolton cribsheet for details.
